

Invoice PDFs to a spreadsheet that checks its own math

One command reads a folder of supplier invoices and writes an Excel file, two CSVs and an HTML summary.

THE PROBLEM

Someone retypes supplier invoices into a spreadsheet every week. The layouts differ by supplier, dates come in three formats, some invoices run across pages, and one wrong figure quietly corrupts the ledger.

WHAT I BUILT

- Extraction of supplier, number, date, every line, net, tax and total
- Checks that net plus tax equals the total and the lines add up to the net
- Scans with no text layer flagged for review instead of guessed
- Styled Excel output with review rows tinted and sorted to the top
- 20 awkward sample invoices: 4 layouts, 3 date formats, a two page invoice, a scan

MEASURED RESULTS

19 of 20

invoices go straight through, 1 is held for review

13 tests

including an end to end check of every extracted total

3 bugs

found and fixed while building, including a tax rate read as an amount
